

Charles Fraser, bronze, 6 feet high.

Susie Chisholm

"Hilton Head Island, SC, commissioned this sculpture of Charles Fraser. This image was from a photograph of Fraser, the first developer on the island, in the March 3, 1962, edition of the Saturday Evening Post. Fraser's vision of bringing nature and development together led to the first gated resort community in the country, winning him numerous awards for his use of green space.

"My goals as a portrait sculptor are to capture an individual's spirit and for the sculpture to have a life of its own. My commissions have included personalities ranging from Johnny Mercer, our most famous songwriter, to Major General Anderson, who orchestrated the European air operations during World War II. I am presently working on two Revolutionary War figures that are going to the Boston Tea Party Ships and Museum in Boston."
